DEFAULTER SHAW'S LETTER URGING MRS. STEWART TO JOIN HIM IN FLIGHT

Mrs. Georgia M. Stewart, friend of A. W. Shaw, the Freeport, Me., shoe manufacturer, who disappeared leaving a confession of theft, today received the following letter from Shaw:

Dear Georgia:

It is too late for me to return there and settle up, but I would be able to make a whole bundle of money soon, and then everything would be all right, as my wife would set me free, and then we could be married. Come and join me. Get out of town and don't let any one see you. I think that the boat route is the easier one, and if you have to have any assistance write to me here. I want you with me very much. I do not think I have made a mistake so far, although it is awfully hard for you, I know. I have all the money I want to go into the business I told you about. I want you to leave as soon as you can get away, for I must leave here within a few days. If I am not here when you arrive, my friend L. will let you have my address and he will also furnish you money. I do not know exactly where I am going, but I think it will be Brazil. I had to meet some men in Savannah from South America, and they said that they would fix me up down there. I beg of you for all that there is between us to join me at your first opportunity. In any event, let me hear from you at once. Yours, ARTHUR.

AVIS INWELL DEATH DECREE

Avis Lindell, the Hyannis club singer, who was married to the late George M. Stewart, has been declared dead by the court. The decree was issued by Judge J. W. Sullivan on the 18th inst.

The little girl died in a maniacal condition, it was stated by the court. It was the form of a text of Scripture from Job xlii, 15.

Though he slay me, yet will I trust him.

This is one of the most remarkable of the astonishing stories that have come to light in connection with the death of the girl. The story is a true one, and it is a story of a girl who was declared dead by the court.

The fact that she was declared dead by the court is a story of a girl who was declared dead by the court.

While the girl was in the hospital, she was declared dead by the court.

Desperate Desmond

For the Villain 'Twas an Ill Wind That Showed the Laundry Mark on Claude's Collar

Copyright, 1912, by the National News Association

By Hershfield

Desmond, the international crook, with the quizzical blossom in his power, the terrible fate of being executed, all-weather from a comfortable seat in a palace, though he is absolutely gossamer of any good as Claude's perfect hero, is sympathy with the Revolution, and has been about to be executed as a sympathizer of any crime. Desmond had put fingers of with the Imperial forces, Desmond is the Manchu doctor in Claude's laundry, powerless to aid her lover in any way, and when the Chinese Republicans found the more since she cannot talk Chinese, these they decided upon Claude's execution as Desmond is able to do. He speaks the language of criminals of all nations, the fall of the landlord's sword.

"Tis an ill wind that blows nobody good. A slight breeze has lifted the collar of Claude's coat, and the astonished executioner recognizes the laundry mark of his brother, who has a chain of Chinese laundries in America. With true Chinese thrift, the executioner delays to end the career of a man who was a customer of his brother. Customers are scarce."

And then comes an affecting scene. The executioner, who was lately about to execute Claude's head with Claude in his own grasp, who has been in a troubling voice asks about his brother, Claude tells him that his brother is doing well, and to add to the good impression Claude declares that he has often eaten chop only in brother's restaurant. This may be true at that.

Of course, as soon as Desmond sees the executioner, he takes it on the run. The laundry is likely to be in a hurry to clean the pants with Claude's collar in the great of Desmond if he gets hold of him, for he does not know where Rosamond has been executed. For the chase on the route see tomorrow's picture. They will be full of thrills.

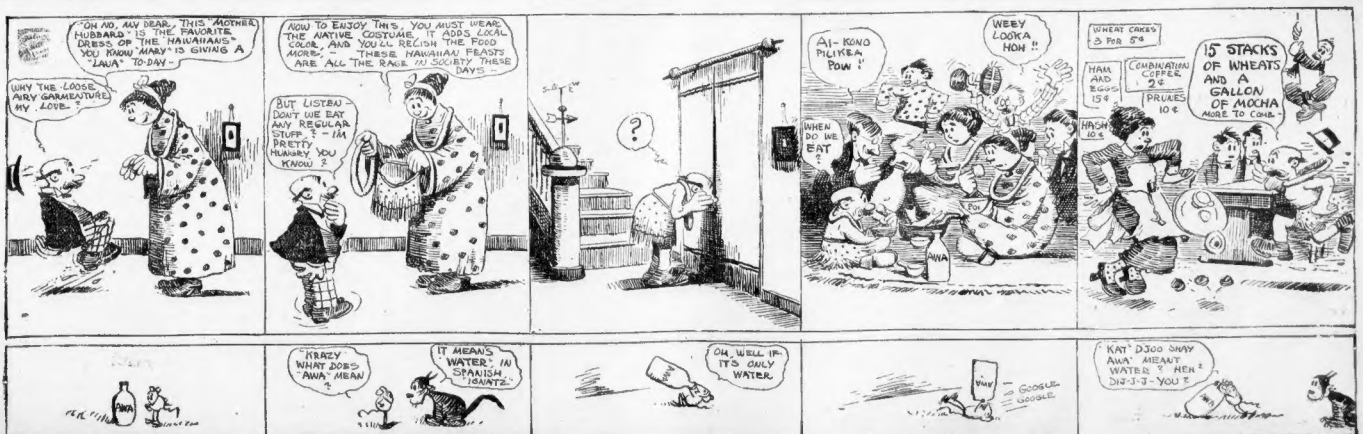

"I'm the boy!" cries Desperate Desmond, "I'd rather be a desperate hero." The villain is scrambling up the roots of the palace with Claude's collar in the great of Desmond if he gets hold of him, for he does not know where Rosamond has been executed. For the chase on the route see tomorrow's picture. They will be full of thrills.
